SECONDARY PREVENTION PROGRAM

The Secondary Prevention Program (SPP) is a prevention education program that addresses the topics of human rights and values, human trafficking and exploitation, safe migration and employment, safe relationships, and digital safety. It is designed to be used by professionals working with children and young people ages 13 to 18 in formal and informal school environments, youth centers, communities, and at home. The SPP is designed to assist children and young people learn to be accountable for their actions and choices by fostering a culture of respect and tolerance toward others.

SPP FACTS

- Flexible: This unique program can be tailored to a variety of audiences. Its accessible format includes interactive activities for children and young people in families, classroom settings, community programs, religious groups, foster care homes, and youth centers.
- Interactive: As an activity-based program, each session includes interactive and play-based sessions that allow children and young people to engage with the learning experience.
- Easy to Use: Composed of three interactive sessions, with two parts per session. This program includes detailed instructions and videos, allowing visual support for facilitators every step of the way.
- Inspirational: This program includes 4 optional action-based activities that can be used throughout. These range from creative writing to music-based responses that allow young people to learn by applying, analysing, and evaluating the session content.

SPP GOALS

SPP aims to equip facilitators and empower young people to:

1. Recognise the importance of human rights in their lives.
2. Identify safe and unsafe relationships.
3. Develop strategies for personal safety actions.
4. Understand digital literacy and digital safety tools.
5. Take action to combat human trafficking and online exploitation.

Who can facilitate SPP?
