Human Trafficking

WHAT IS HUMAN TRAFFICKING?

According to the United Nations, human trafficking is modern slavery. It is the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of people through force, fraud or deception, with the aim of exploiting them for profit. Men, women and children of all ages and from all backgrounds can become victims of this crime, which occurs in every region of the world. Traffickers often use violence or fraudulent employment agencies and fake promises of education and job opportunities to trick and coerce their victims.; it also happens in our community. It is estimated that human trafficking generates R 2 814 322 500 000.00 per year.¹

WHAT IS SEX TRAFFICKING?

A commercial sex act that is induced by force, fraud, or coercion.

WHAT IS LABOUR TRAFFICKING?

Labour trafficking is recruitment, harbouring, transportation, provision, or obtaining a person for labour or services through the use of force, fraud, or coercion for the purposes of involuntary servitude, peonage, debt bondage, or slavery.

WHERE DOES LABOUR TRAFFICKING FREQUENTLY TAKE PLACE?

The top industries that have a high risk of exploitation include technology, clothing, fish, cocoa, sugarcane, construction, agriculture, healthcare, hospitality, housekeeping and facilities operation, transportation, and warehousing.

WHO IS AT RISK OF BECOMING A VICTIM OF FORCED LABOUR?

While anyone can become a victim of human trafficking in any of its forms, there are certain groups of people who are more vulnerable to trafficking and exploitation because of their situation or their position within society, including:

- Migrants, irregular migrants, stateless populations, and refugees
- Marginalised groups
- Persons with physical or intellectual disabilities
- Persons facing employment instability, financial insecurity, and debt
- Children

WHAT ARE SOME RED FLAGS THAT MAY INDICATE A FALSE JOB OPPORTUNITY?

- You are offered a job without a clear explanation of the conditions of your work
- Your identification documents are taken away from you
- Your travel, accommodation, and travel documents are paid for
- You are offered a job by a stranger
- You are forced to sleep and work in the same place as your employment.
- You are forced to do work you didn’t agree to do
- You are not allowed to talk to your family or friends
- You are treated in an aggressive manner, physically or verbally
- You are not allowed to take breaks while working
- You are not allowed to move freely or leave the workplace
- You do not receive adequate compensation for the work you do
- You are asked to commit crimes or sell drugs against your will
- You are taken to a job location in a location that is different from where you agreed to work

WHAT ARE SOME SAFETY TIPS WHEN SEEKING EMPLOYMENT ABROAD?

01 Know the minimum wage in the country of work: Don’t be fooled by promises of an unrealistically high salary if you are applying for a temporary and/or unskilled position domestically or abroad. If you receive an offer that sounds “too good to be true,” then it is likely to not be true. Check the average salary on the internet for the position you are applying for. If they promise you much more, there is probably something wrong.

02 Ensure there is a contract: Even if your friend or family member coordinated this employment opportunity, it is important to ensure that there is a contract. Your employer abroad and/or the intermediary agency are obliged to provide you with a contract in your native language or in a language you are fluent in. Even if the intermediary agency provided you with a bilingual contract our advice is to show this contract to an independent translator to make sure it is transparent. Make certain that the intermediary agency has a license from the province and provides employment services in those countries and within those professions stated in the permission. Do not sign a contract that states that you will carry out “other activities” without describing them.
If this or something like this has ever happened to you, do not be ashamed. This kind of exploitation is illegal, and it is not your fault.

Put safeguards in place:

- Maintain contact with your family and friends and provide them with updated contact and location information.
- Give them an updated photo
- Create a codeword or phrase that will let your family know if you are in a dangerous situation
- If you have doubts about your potential employment, find a lawyer who you trust and show him a contract
- Be aware of your rights in a country where you are going to be employed
- Have a small amount of money with you at all times in case of an emergency
- Learn at least a few necessary phrases in the language of the country where you will be staying such as "please help me" and "where is the police station?"
- Memorise a few useful phone numbers before you go to work abroad: the number of the agency dealing with human trafficking where you will be located, the telephone numbers of your Embassy in a country where you are going to work, as well as emergency numbers
- Create a Safety Plan and a Safety Route should you ever find yourself in a situation that is abusive or coercive
- Don’t assume that a recruitment agency is legitimate because it is licensed in the country in which it resides. Licensed recruiting agencies can and have engaged or facilitated human trafficking.

Hold onto your personal identification documents:

When abroad, never give your ID/passport to anyone, under any pretext. Make a few copies of your documents, and keep them in different places. If your employer asks you to give your ID/passport, you can give him a copy. Remember about Work Visa, it is the only way you can work abroad officially, even if you are looking for a temporary position. Make sure that your potential employer is allowed to employ foreigners.

Make sure you know the details of the trip and where you will be living:

Before making the trip, you should know the exact place, address, city, where you are going to stay, have contact details, telephone number of the people you will be with, as well as having all the security numbers and addresses (police of the country, medical services, NGOs that can help you...) You should also know the details of your trip, time and destination, reference of the trip, etc. You must have all the information regarding your place of work as well as your home in the country of destination.
